NATIONAL MARKER DESIGNS H1N1 FLU SIGNS & POSTERS FOR COMPANIES FLU PREVENTION PROGRAMS

North Smithfield, RI - National Marker, a leading manufacturer of safety identification products, has developed an offering of signs, posters and labels for use in restrooms, cafeterias, conference rooms and common areas to aid companies implementing their own flu preparedness program for H1N1 and seasonal flu prevention.

With a next wave of the H1N1 virus expected in the next few months, the flu remains a major risk factor for employees' safety. OSHA recognizes the seriousness of the flu threat and continues to look for a hierarchy of controls such as use of personal protective equipment and administrative controls. One of the best ways to prevent the spread of the flu, according to the Center for Disease Control, continues to be consistent and frequent hand washing.

Educate employees on the importance of and proper way to wash their hands by providing visual reminders throughout your facility. All National Marker flu prevention products are professionally designed, easy to understand and are available in multiple sizes and materials to suit a variety of locations and applications. To get more information about these H1N1 Flu products, call National Marker at 800-453-2727 or visit the website at www.nationalmarker.com.
